Edward Snowden

29-YEAR-OLD NSA CONTRACTOR EXPOSED U.S. SPY PROGRAMS

Reuters

LONDON A former CIA employee working as a contractor at the National Security Agency said he was the man who had leaked details of a top-secret surveillance program, acting out of conscience to protect "basic liberties for people around the world."

Holed up in a hotel room in Hong Kong, Edward Snowden, 29, said he had thought long and hard before publicizing details of an NSA program code-named PRISM, saying he had done so because he felt his country was building an unaccountable and secret espionage machine that spied on every American.

The CIA declined to comment.

Both the Washington Post and Britain's Guardian—to whom he gave the documents he had stolen—published Snowden's identity Sunday after he sought to be identified.

"I don't want to live in a society that does these sort of things ... I do not want to live in a world where everything I do and say is recorded. That is not something I am willing to support or live under," he told the Guardian.

“I don't want to live in a society that does these sort of things ... I do not want to live in a world where everything I do and say is recorded.” —Edward Snowden

"The NSA has built an infrastructure that allows it to intercept almost everything. With this capability, the vast majority of human communications are automatically ingested without targeting. If I wanted to see your emails or your wife's phone, all I have to do is use intercepts. I can get your emails, passwords, phone records, credit cards," Snowden said.

The Guardian published revelations last week that U.S. security services had monitored data about phone calls from Verizon and Internet data from large companies such as Google and Facebook.

Some legal experts were puzzled as to why Snowden fled to Hong Kong because it has an extradition treaty with the U.S. while mainland China does not.

Jesselyn Radack, a former U.S. Justice Department attorney who represents whistleblowers, told Reuters: "As a whistleblower myself, this is one of the most significant leakers in my lifetime and in U.S. history."

She said she hoped the case could become "a watershed moment that could change the war on whistleblowers and the broader war on information in our country."

Snowden said he had been working at the super-secret NSA as an employee of defense contractor Booz Allen Hamilton and decided to break his silence after becoming disenchanted with President Obama, whom he said had continued the policies of predecessor George W. Bush.

"My sole motive is to inform the public as to that which was done in their name and that which is done against them," he said. "I understand that I will be made to suffer for my actions. I will be satisfied if the federation of secret law, unequal pardon and irresistible executive powers that rule the world that I love are revealed even for an instant."

Confessions of a fair-weather fan

Stephen Markley

» redeye@tribune.com
» @stephenmarkley

The Blackhawks have taught me the joy of being a fair-weather fan. Like most sports fans, I used to view the fair-weather fan with derision: a scum-sucking bottom-feeder who sits out the bad times and wanders in for the victory party.

Yet watching the Blackhawks make their run this season, I've come to understand that being a fair-weather fan—who barely knows what's going on, who doesn't actually care about the outcome of any game—is awesome.

Admittedly, I don't care for hockey. It's the sport of inbred Canadian tar-sands miners. Because I'm a white guy so white I almost come back around the event horizon of the racial universe to being a black woman, I like basketball. It's a sport where more than five things happen in four hours.

Plus, in hockey there are two halftimes. (And don't give me that crap about how these are "intermissions." Every other team sport that requires the traversal of a plane of geographic space is divided into symmetrical units of time, and hockey's like the overgrown ape of a second-grader eating paste off his fingers who didn't get the message.)

As my buddy Justin pointed out, during these two halftimes there typically have been, like, three plays of note, so the guys with terrible haircuts sit around talking about those three plays, and meanwhile I've forgotten there's even a game on. I'm flirting with the Sedgwick's bartender or catching up on my Selena Gomez jams or seeing if we've got a decent Lena Dunham nude scene in "Girls" this week.

I'll also admit I can barely name three Blackhawks players. Hell, I met one of those Patrick guys (can't remember if it was Kane or Sharp) at some function a few years ago and had no idea who he was. I asked him what he did for a living. He told me he played hockey, and I was like, "OK, bro, good luck with that. By the way, Steve Markley here. 'Publish This Book.' Ever heard of it? Here's an autograph for your panty drawer."

But you know what? When the Hawks score, no one in the bar knows any of that. You just get to high-five and sing that "Chelsea Dagger" song. Who doesn't love getting free high-fives and drunkenly singing a victory song with exactly one lyric composed of one word?

And on the flipside, if the Hawks lose? That's where being a fair-weather fan is even better, because I. Don't. Care. At. All. Doesn't matter whatsoever.

When my Cavaliers were losing consecutive heartbreaking playoff series during the LeBron James Cleveland era, I had ulcers and weird skin rashes and my teeth got loose in their sockets and I thought about dying all the time. When you're a fair-weather fan, after a loss you can just think of something awesome—like that it's been 13 years since I was a virgin or that Bob Dylan actually wrote the song "Wagon Wheel"—and it's better than a Blackhawks goal anyway.

So here's to the fair-weather fan, because we got it made. Now, when does Cubs season start again?

Duh-da-da-duh-da-da-duh-da-da-da-da-da ...

City says Dearborn bike signals keeping cyclists in line

Chicago Tribune

Chicago's first two-way protected bike lanes have been in place for six months through the center of downtown on Dearborn Street, and the experience so far has led city officials to conclude that all cyclists really need to obey traffic laws are signals of their own, telling them that stop means stop.

Monitoring by the Chicago Department of Transportation shows that cyclists stopping for red lights has improved by 161 percent since cyclist-specific traffic signals, which glow with the image of a bike on the lens, were installed on Dearborn in December.

It marks apparent progress as the city on Monday launches the annual Bike to Work Week.

"Cyclists will really abide by a signal if they have one," Chicago Transportation Commissioner Gabe Klein said.

Added Lee Crandell of the Active Transportation Alliance: "It's important to have infrastructure that speaks to people who are biking. Otherwise, they feel the roadway was not designed for them."

Yet the whopping 161 percent increase in compliance on Dearborn also seems to highlight the blatant disregard many cyclists regularly show elsewhere toward the most basic rule of the road—stop on red—just as too many motorists are at fault for violations that include rolling through right turns on red lights or texting while driving, officials said.

The bicycle-specific traffic signals on Dearborn are part of a federally funded experiment involving the two-way bike lanes, which are protected from moving vehicle traffic by plastic posts and a parking lane over much of the 1.15-mile route between Kinzie and Polk streets.

The Police Department has no reports of crashes between cyclists and vehicles or cyclists and pedestrians since the two-way bike

BY THE NUMBERS

$450,000 Cost of the Dearborn bike lane project

13,100 Number of vehicles using the northbound-only section of Dearborn on weekdays

81 Percentage of bike riders who are obeying the traffic signals, according to CDOT. That's up from 31 percent before the lights were installed.

$50-$200 The new fine for cyclists who disobey traffic laws, up from $25

$1,000 The new fine for dooring a cyclist, up from $500 lanes were installed, Cmdr. Al Nagode said.

"I'm sure there have been some close shaves here and there," Klein said. "Cyclists need to pay attention. You cannot drift into the other lane. I think it will take time for people to get used to the new traffic pattern, but so far it has gone pretty well."

Gun registry on the ropes

Chicago Tribune

Chicago's 3-year-old gun registry could go away as part of the concealed carry law state lawmakers recently passed, but few are publicly mourning the loss of a database once heralded as a key part of the city's gun control laws.

The registry, put in place by then-Mayor Richard M. Daley after the U.S. Supreme Court tossed out Chicago's 1982 handgun ban, required people who wanted guns in Chicago to buy city permits and register the weapons with police.

Gun rights advocates derided the registry and Chicago's municipal permit process as ineffective in curbing gun crime and an unfair burden for law-abiding gun owners.

The numbers indicate the registry wasn't effective. There are now about 8,650 Chicago firearms permit holders who have registered around 22,000 firearms, according to Mayor Emanuel's office. That's compared with the roughly 150,000 Chicago households the University of Chicago Crime Lab estimates currently have guns.

Trayvon Martin murder case goes to trial

1 Jury selection begins Monday in the murder trial of George Zimmerman, who shot and killed unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin in 2012 and then famously walked free for 44 days, triggering nationwide protests and calls for his arrest.

At least 10 injured in hot air balloon crashes

2 Gusty winds forced the crash landings of four hot air balloons in separate mishaps Saturday northwest of Denver, leaving at least 10 people hurt. None of the injuries was life-threatening, authorities said.

Charges filed in building collapse

3 The crane operator facing charges over a deadly building collapse was denied bail Sunday. Sean Benshop, 42, is charged with six counts of involuntary manslaughter, 13 counts of recklessly endangering another person, and one count of "risking a catastrophe," District Attorney spokeswoman Tasha Jamerson said.

3 suspected al-Qaida militants killed

4 Three individuals suspected to be militants from al-Qaida were killed when their vehicle was struck by an air strike in Yemen's northern province of al-Jawf on Sunday. Defense Ministry officials said. The officials would not confirm whether a U.S. drone was involved in the operation.

Booker declares Senate candidacy

5 Newark, N.J., Mayor Cory Booker on Saturday declared his candidacy for the Senate in this year's special election to fill the seat of the late Democratic Sen. Frank Lautenberg.

5 dead in shooting spree

6 SANTA MONICA, Calif. A 26-year-old woman who had registered to take summer classes at Santa Monica College died Sunday from wounds she suffered in a shooting spree Friday that left four others, including her father, dead.

Marcela Franco was with her father, Carlos Navarro Franco, 68, in an SUV on campus when they were shot. She was going to buy textbooks at the time.

Carlos Navarro Franco died; Marcela Franco was taken to Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center.

"Her family was with her by her side," Santa Monica College President Chui L. Tsang said in a message to the school community. "Our deepest sympathies go to the Franco family. At the appropriate time, the College will convene a campus-wide memorial."

The school has created a fund honoring the Franco family.

The suspect in the shootings has been identified as John Zawahri, sources told CNN.

Authorities say he killed his father, Samir "Sam" Zawahri, and brother, Chris Zawahri, in a Santa Monica house before carjacking a woman and firing at a public bus Friday.

Scant details are trickling in about Zawahri, who was killed by police at Santa Monica College on Friday, the day before his 24th birthday.

The superintendent of the Santa Monica-Malibu school district said Zawahri attended a high school for students behind in academic credits in 2006.

MENTAL HEALTH

A law enforcement source with knowledge of the investigation said the gunman had suffered from mental health issues and that he was hospitalized for treatment after allegedly talking about harming someone.

"We are shocked and deeply saddened by the tragedy that ... once again, shatters our nation's confidence," Superintendent Sandra Lyon said.

Police had contact with the Zawahri in 2006, but because he was a juvenile, authorities couldn't release further information, Santa Monica Police Chief Jacqueline Seabrooks said.

Nelson Mandela in serious condition

8 JOHANNESBURG South Africans offered prayers at church services while the rest of the world awaited word Sunday on Nelson Mandela's condition, a day after the ailing civil rights icon was rushed to the hospital yet again.

The office hasn't offered an update since informing the world Saturday that Mandela was in "serious but stable condition" at a Pretoria hospital with a recurring lung infection.

Visitors to the website of the South African president's office got error messages Sunday.

Mandela, 94, has become increasingly frail, and has been in and out of hospitals in recent years. Each time he has done so, he has sparked concerns worldwide.

On Sunday, the front page of South Africa's Sunday Times read, "It's time to let him go." The paper quoted Mandela's longtime friend Andrew Mlangeni as saying that the time may have come for South Africans to say goodbye to the beloved icon. "You have been coming to the hospital too many times. Quite clearly you are not well and there is a possibility you might not be well again," Mlangeni told the paper.

THE DIGIT

9 That's how many prisoners were freed by an armed mob in the Mexican state of Guerrero on Sunday. The group killed two guards and injured another. Although it remains unclear exactly what happened, the state government said in a news release that the prison director left the scene after the men were freed, and could not be located.

THE HAT TRICK

WHAT'S BUZZIN' IN THE BLACKHAWKS' WORLD

Long time no see

If you're having trouble remembering the last time the Blackhawks and Bruins played each other, you're not alone. It was Oct. 15, 2011, a 3-2 Boston shootout victory at the United Center. Patrick Kane seemed like a whole different guy back then, eh?

THE MOUTHWATCH

"It was the big talk [Sunday] morning. It's something, when you're involved in that before, in championships—and people who witness that who haven't been part of championships—it kind of gives you goosebumps to understand the reality of it." —Cubs manager Dale Sveum

HOT YEAR

1979 That's the last time two of the NHL's Original Six teams (the others being Toronto, Montreal, Detroit and the N.Y. Rangers) met in the Stanley Cup finals. The Blackhawks and Boston have never met in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

RECOVERED FROM THE LAST HAWKS WIN? GOOD. NOW THINGS GET REALLY INTENSE

Duncan Keith entered the press conference area and set down a plastic bag holding four enormous bottles of juice.

After what the Blackhawks defenseman and his teammates had just endured Saturday, you can't blame him for being thirsty. It can't be easy to recover from a double-overtime, Western Conference title-clinching win.

Will the Hawks have enough left for an encore in the Stanley Cup finals? That will be decided starting Wednesday at the United Center.

For the time being, amid their usual preparation for a playoff series, one can only imagine how much they need to unwind. Setting aside the physical obstacles they've overcome to this point, ponder some of what has happened the past six months:

■ 140 days ago, the Hawks were scattered between two continents, unsure whether the bitter lockout would swallow the entire NHL season.

■ When the season finally began, the Hawks went 21-0-3 in their first 24 games, the best start in league history—with all the national media attention and pressure that came along with it.

■ Two weeks ago, the President's Trophy winners were on the ropes against archrival Detroit, having been shut out in Game 4.

With 10 seconds left in the third period of Game 5 against Los Angeles, it looked like that series was over. Ten seconds later, the game was headed to overtime.

As Keith, Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews sat at the podium after Saturday's victory, their 12th of these playoffs, they looked like they each had just run a marathon. While wearing a Tommy Hawk suit. Even sitting still and conserving energy looked like a chore.

Kane was the only one of the three who came close to cracking a smile during the 13-minute interview session. He looked to be under the spell of fatigue mixed with focus wrapped in hat-trick euphoria.

"Right now I think it's almost like I'm in a different zone, like in the twilight zone or something," Kane said. "I'm kind of out of it. It's definitely a good feeling, though."

Wherever that is, he might want to take his teammates with him. The Blackhawks' foe in the Cup finals, Boston, just discarded high-powered and heavily-favored Pittsburgh like Justin Bieber would his pet monkey.

Throw in the fact that the Bruins will have a groundswell of sympathy in the wake of the Boston Marathon tragedy, and non-players and -coaches can barely begin to understand how monumental the emotions in this series will be.

Fortunately the Hawks have plenty going for them. Coach Joel Quenneville and his mustache are as unflinching as ever. Bryan Bickell is becoming a star before our eyes. Corey Crawford is impenetrable when he has to be. Kane and Toews are scoring points in bunches again.

Maybe, just maybe, they have enough juice left.

1	Let's have your Stanley Cup finals prediction.	Hawks win in six and I cry like a baby (like circa 2010).	There will be endless comparisons between Chicago and Boston hot dogs. (And Hawks in six!)	I suffer—but survive—at least three more grabbers en route to another Hawks win.	Clear Michigan Avenue for a parade on Friday, June 28.	Hawks win the Cup. We all descend into a drunken rage that lasts until Halloween.
2	Give a nickname to Corey Crawford's glove.	The Love Glove, which will help Ruin the Bruins.	The Crow's Nest, where dreams—and opponents' goals—go to die.	Goal-burglar Helper.	Gary Payton.	"Excalibur?" Nah, too nerdy. "Mjolnir?" Nah, too Norse. How about "The Mitten of Destiny?"
3	Who's been the biggest surprise for the Hawks this postseason?	Bickell ... now known as #BICKELL!	Bryan "How Many Zeroes are you putting on my next check?" Bickell!	Ice Girl Cynthia—she's really stepped up her rink sweeping.	Big Bick and his wrister. (Careful with the typos!)	Bryan Bickell. He's going to be a very rich man next season. Hope it's in Chicago!
4	What should the winner of the French Open receive?	Is that a party during the Stanley Cup?	Lifetime supply of French fries. Or do we still call them Freedom Fries?	Lifetime supply of berets.	Je n'aime pas ça.	MELISSA THEURIAU (Google her).
5	If you sat through a 20-inning baseball game, how would you recover?	If it's anything like Saturday's Cubs game, I would go directly to Bernie's and drink heavily.	A double espresso and a double-overtime hockey game to get the blood going again.	Why would I need to recover from a six-hour nap?	If it was a Cubs or Sox 20-inning game ... you would NOT recover.	Watching golf? Puts me to sleep every time.

Love MJ but hate LeBron? Look closer

redeyesports@tribune.com

evanfmoore

Why isn't it enough for fans to enjoy watching athletes based only on their skills and accomplishments? Why do we need to know about a player's personal life? Why do we need athletes to be nice people?

Those questions lead me to the most polarizing sports figure today: LeBron James.

Why do fans

hate him so much? By reading Twitter and Facebook, many believe James is a spoiled, arrogant, self-centered crybaby who gets all the calls he wants.

The angst LeBron conjures has me thinking about another superstar who continues to sell sneakers years after he retired: Michael Jordan.

I suggest you read "The Jordan Rules" by Sam Smith. The book gives an unprecedented look into the man behind the endorsements. When I tell people about it, they say they don't want their perception of Jordan to change.

My retort to that statement usually goes like this: Is Jordan the greatest basketball player of all time? Yes, no doubt, but is he the nicest person of all time? Absolutely not.

Some of the stuff Jordan did to his teammates and opponents makes LeBron look like a saint.

Read about how Jordan told a flight at-

MIAMI 103, SAN ANTONIO 84 (Series tied 1-1)

Breaking open a close game in the second half, the Miami Heat evened the NBA Finals at a game apiece with a 103-84 victory over San Antonio on Sunday. LeBron James finished with 17 points, seven assists and eight rebounds. He also had two blocks, including a spectacular rejection of Tiago Splitter.

tendant not to serve Horace Grant because he had a bad game, or how he once told a teammate not to have tickets set aside for his family because Jordan thought he wouldn't play.

You don't even have to read the book. Just watch Jordan's Hall of Fame speech on YouTube.

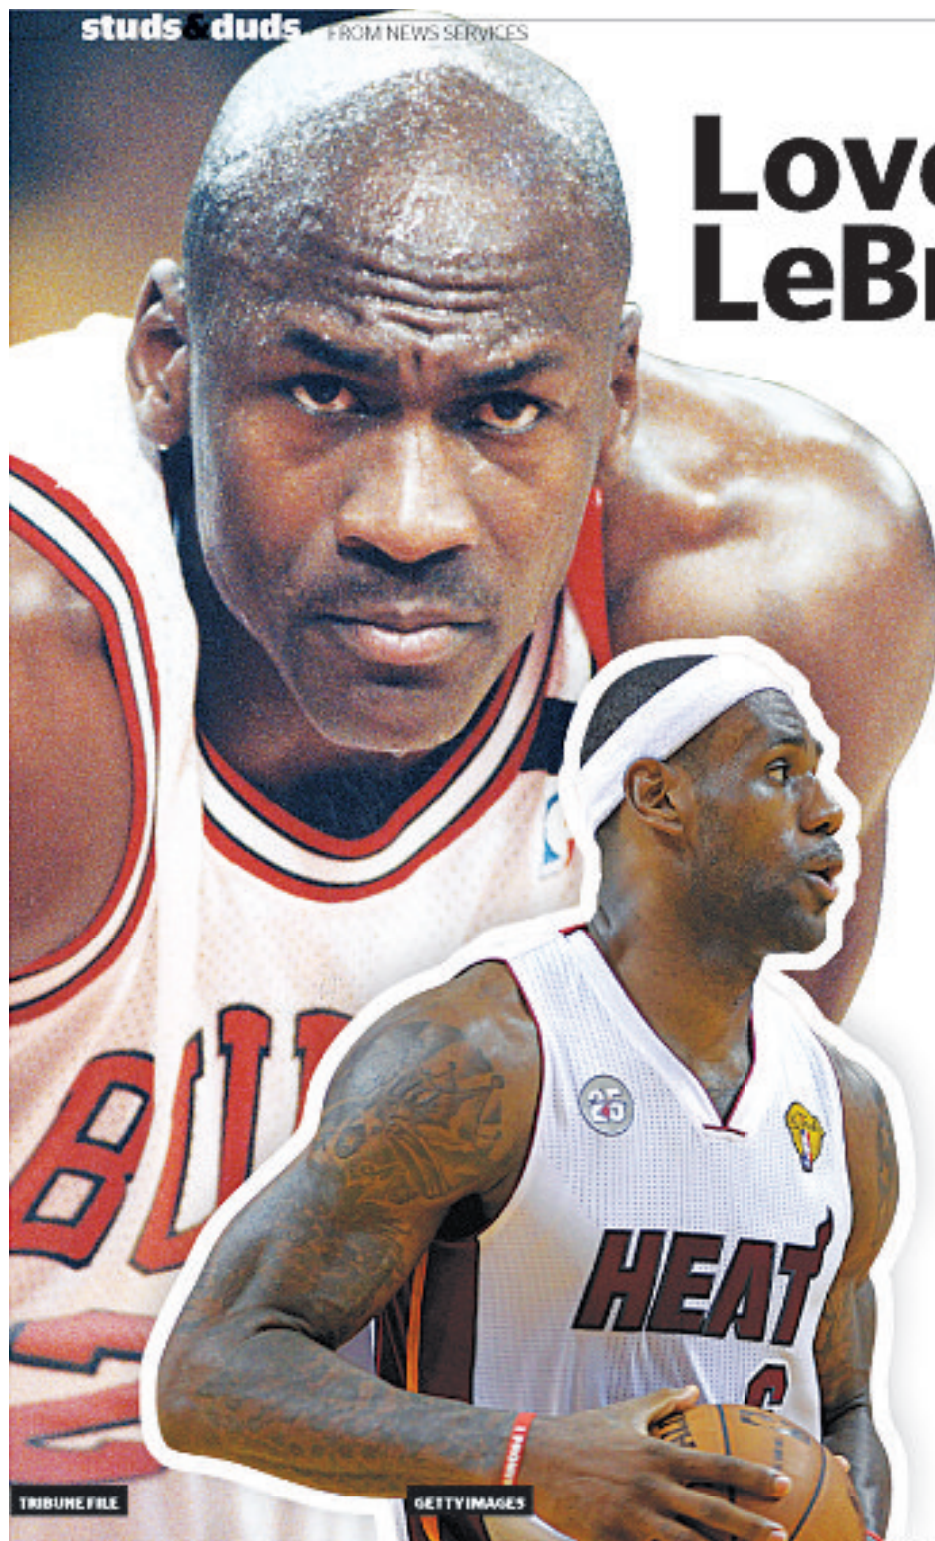

I'm not bashing Jordan; I'm just pointing out the hypocrisy. The James "haters," especially the local ones, don't seem to want to acknowledge that.

Think Jordan wasn't arrogant and didn't want calls? No one who rooted for the Bulls during the championship run seemed to complain about the whistles that went Jordan's way.

If James had signed with the Bulls instead of Miami in summer 2010, Chicago wouldn't be having this conversation. Everyone you know would all of the sudden become the biggest Bulls fan ever.

Some people are too busy critiquing James' every move to accept him for what he is: a really, really good basketball player. We shouldn't expect him to be anything more.

Marriage rocks for K-Cav

Jay Cutler was true to his text message. It appears the Bears QB has married his reality TV star fiancée, Kristin Cavallari. "I'm officially Kristin Elizabeth Cutler!!!!!" she tweeted Friday along with a picture of a wedding ring. They got a marriage license early Friday in Nashville, Tenn., TMZ reported. And there are still weeks before training camp. Smart move, Jay.

Divorced, but not hatin'

Eva Longoria does not appear to hold grudges against the San Antonio Spurs even though her ex-husband, Tony Parker, is their point guard. "Go Spurs Go! I say Spurs in 5!!!!!" the actress tweeted Thursday after San Antonio won Game 1. But if they lose the series to Miami, does she blame it all on Parker?

Scary moment at French Open

A bare-chested protester wearing a white mask let off a flare and ran onto the court during Sunday's French Open men's final. The spotlight on Seth Meyers has been shining so bright these days that he probably feels like reaching for his sunglasses. This spring, he's been all over the news not only for landing the gig as Jimmy Fallon's 2014 replacement on NBC's "Late Night," but also for speculation as to who will replace him as "Saturday Night Live" head writer and "Weekend Update" anchor. So what's next? Friday, Meyers—a Northwestern grad who was raised in New Hampshire but born in Evanston—returns to Chicago for a stand-up show as part of the TBS Just For Laughs comedy festival with opening acts Al Madrigal from "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" and former "SNL" and "30 Rock" writer (and native Chicagoan) Hannibal Buress. We asked RedEye readers what questions they'd like to ask Meyers and included our favorites here. —JULIA BORCHERTS, FOR REDEYE

Jimmy Fallon has become known for his wacky games, from charades with Jane Lynch to Face-ket Ball with Bradley Cooper. How would you complete the following 'Late Night' analogy: Jimmy Fallon is to games as Seth Meyers is to ____?

[Laughs.] I'm going to say straight-manning.

Why's that?

The thing I've enjoyed so much about "Weekend Update"—and that we most want to figure out how to bring into the new show—is I love being straight man to people like Drunk Uncle or Stefon or anyone who comes on "Weekend Update."

RedEye reader Caitlin O'Malley asks: You said earlier this month that Amy Poehler would be your dream first guest. Is she going to be a part of the show in any way?

Well, first of all, her financial demands for this first-guesting are going through the roof. So we're hoping we can carve out room in the budget. I hope that the show is always a place where current or past "SNL" cast members that I've worked with can stop by and do whatever they want.

When Jimmy Fallon announced his move, there was a lot of talk about it being time for a woman or a minority to enter the late-night circle. What do you think it would take to make that happen?

I'm assuming at some point, it will just feel like the natural choice. By the way, there are plenty of great natural choices now who, for all I know, turned it down before they came to me. [Laughs.] But I will tell you, as someone who got the job offer, there are numerous people—both female and minority—that had they gotten this job, I would have completely understood that as a good choice.

But before you transition into that role, you'll be back in Chicago for Just For Laughs. What's the difference between your stand-up persona and host persona?

Fortunately, they're fairly close. The nice thing about being on "Weekend Update" and having your own show is you get to be yourself. And obviously, the same is true with stand-up. The biggest difference is, I would say, time spent with me. That'll change, obviously, when I have a late-night show but for now, people are used to seeing me for 10 to 15 minutes at a time and with stand-up, you get to be out there for an hour. And that time allows you to be a little bit more personal and tell stories about your life that would feel very self-indulgent if you did it from the "Weekend Update" desk.

Where do you like to go out when you're back in Chicago?

Every time I'm there with Lorne Michaels, he makes us go to Gibsons steakhouse. Lorne talks about the pieces of cake there the way other people would talk about the Loch Ness Monster—like he can't believe it's real. Also, I always love to go back to Second City, go back to iO, try to see some performances.

RedEye reader Heidi Hageman asks: I recently heard an interview of [Bill] Hader on [Howard] Stern and he said that he had a hard time not breaking character to laugh sitting next to you on 'Weekend Update.' What sketch or character was the funniest to you personally?

Fred Armisen is someone who pretty much anything he does really tickles me. He and Vanessa Bayer do a recurring thing where they play friends of dictators that I always really enjoy. Obviously, the other people are the ones who are playing big, juicy characters. The thing with Stefon that Bill once told me—and once he told me that, I always tried to keep doing, was—Bill always is just delighted with how patient I am with Stefon [laughs], that after the 17th time Stefon comes out, I still think he might actually have a list of things that are family-friendly. In real life, I lack patience, so Bill always found it funny that my "Weekend Update" persona was so naively patient.

BRAND MACHINE

Russell Brand might seem anarchic, but don't worry—there's a method to his madness

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

Based on his character Aldous Snow in “Forgetting Sarah Marshall” and “Get Him to the Greek”—not to mention his years of highly publicized drug and alcohol addiction-related controversies and much-discussed marriage to/divorce from Katy Perry—it would be easy to erroneously label Russell Brand as a loose cannon.

He does celebrate stand-up comedy's potential for mayhem and chaos, claiming that “mundanity and structure is against our nature.”

Still, 10 years sober and without any regrets, the English comedian (appearing Wednesday at the Chicago Theatre as part of the TBS Just For Laughs festival) also says “it's a very powerful position to be a comedian” and notes that he wants to do more with comedy than just make people laugh. By phone from L.A., the 38-year-old funnyman talked about his unexpectedly heavy comic material and how his acclaimed sexual history may influence his hypothetical political career.

What's something you'll do on stage during “Just for Laughs” that none of the other comedians will do?

Well, my material for a start. ... I don't know what they're going to be doing, but I do know that the show will begin and end with a real opportunity for spontaneity and [will] really incorporate and include the audience. I get into the audience, get involved in the audiences' lives, deal with their personal problems and, on some occasions, follow them home.

With you focusing on that spontaneous vibe, how much preparation is involved? Or can you just get up and vamp?

No, the core material I'm working very hard on. I'm talking about icons: I'm talking about the figures of Malcolm X, Gandhi, Che Guevara and Jesus Christ and how they've influenced culture.

Those are some big figures. Do you feel like that's sensitive material to joke about? How do you feel people receive that stuff?

Well, I don't know yet. The show that we're doing has been very, very well-received. It's going incredibly well because it's not like I'm interested in ridiculing Malcolm X, Che Guevara, Gandhi and Jesus. [They're] very important icons. What I'm interested in is who are the real men behind those figures, and how are those images used?

You're not just interested in comedy, having posted some political statements recently. How concerned are you that a label like “Shagger of the Year” will prevent you from running for office?

[Laughs.] If anything, “Shagger of the Year” will advance my entitlement to hold high office in a variety of nations. Who wouldn't want an accredited shagger running their country?

How interested are you in doing a nationwide tour as a musician? Would you ever want to do an album and big tour?

No, I wouldn't be interested in doing that. I just don't feel like I have any real facility in that area.

I disagree; you're a really charismatic performer, and I think a lot of people would like to see that.

Ohhhh, thanks, Matt. No, I just prefer to do comedy. I could do some funny songs and stuff, but I'm a little too shy to be jumping around like that.

Magic moment

Dave Franco steps out from his brother's shadow

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

Dave Franco's a good sport about it, but really, we all can stop asking the actor about his big brother James. He's had enough.

"I mean, that happened three years ago," said the younger Franco, currently starring in "Now You See Me." "More than that. Ten years ago. I love and respect him so much. ... Maybe two or three years ago, I made a conscious decision to distance myself from him work-wise just because I want to pave my own path.

"We are very, very different. He can take on roles that I could never touch, and vice-versa."

With recent supporting turns in "21 Jump Street" and "Warm Bodies," and starring with Jesse Eisenberg, Woody Harrelson and Isla Fisher as a quartet of magicians/aspiring bank robbers in "Now You See Me," Franco is proving he can stand on his own.

To play "NYSM" magician Jack Wilder, Franco worked with a magic consultant on set and practiced every night after shooting. "I would come back to my apartment and I would either sit in front of the TV and just practice my little sleight-of-hand moves," he says, "Or I would just be throwing cards against the wall for hours on end."

The 27-year-old actor settled in at the Peninsula Hotel to talk about his non-thieving past and the potential of a magician-related reality show.

Have you ever fantasized about robbing a bank, and what's the worst thing you've ever stolen?

I want to give you a fun answer for the bank, but I'm going to go with no on that. The worst thing I've ever [stolen]—I wasn't a horrible kid in terms of that kind of stuff. I think I'm going to go with a Milky Way from 7-11. Which in hindsight, it's like 50 cents. What the hell was I doing? I can literally probably find 50 cents on the ground outside of 7-11.

Did you get caught?

I did not.

Did you feel guilty while you ate it?

I think so! I was about to say, I think I felt horrible about it. I probably didn't even finish it.

Why do you think magic has a nerdy stigma to it?

I saw this documentary about magic—I forget what it's called now. It was about all these young magicians pretty much discovering magic and how it plays out in their life. A lot of them, the common thread was that they were kind of antisocial and they didn't have a lot of friends and it was a way to make people appreciate them and be in awe of them. That makes sense.

When your character comes on screen in the film he says, "I am the next great magician." How do you think a reality show called "The Next Great Magician" would do?

I think that's a good idea!

Really?

[Laughs.] You're shocked! I think it's a pretty good idea. Everyone loves magic, right? I would assume on a show like that you would get a lot of these young magicians who are trying to bring something fresh to the game. I'm all about it. You could have people from all different fields of magic. Just like the characters in this movie: You have an escape artist, mentalist ... I don't know how you would judge them against each other though, the people in the different fields, but I like the idea. I think you're onto something, man. You almost said it as a joke, but I'm in.

Dave Franco

Would you ever want to play a part that adjusts the way you look? It's so easy for actors to get typecast.

Definitely, definitely. One hundred percent, the answer is yes. There's a role that I can't talk about right now, just 'cause it's something I really want and it's not mine yet, and if I got it, it would be a transformation in terms of the fact that I would probably have a haircut that I gave myself. It would be very bizarre, and I would probably put on some weight and I would dress in suits that are five sizes too big. I like the idea of doing something like that.

Same ol' thing on 'King & Maxwell'

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

» @showpatrol

The ampersand strikes again in TNT's latest crime procedural, "King & Maxwell," but two names in the title doesn't always mean double the quality.

Like the network's "Rizzoli & Isles" & "Franklin & Bash," the new series will live and die on the casting—because everything else about it feels as stale and standard as week-old white bread.

Thankfully, this one stars the always-likable Jon Tenney, most recently Fitz on "The Closer" and "Major Crimes," and the always-game Rebecca Romijn from "Ugly Betty." They play “Every week I’m finding out something more about her. I come home and I go, ‘I cannot believe how lucky I am to have this job.’”

—Mary McDonnell, talking about her character, Sharon Raydor, on "Major Crimes," returning at 8 p.m. Monday on TNT. Read more from the interview at showpatroltv.com.

King & Maxwell
9 p.m. Monday, TNT

Sean King and Michelle Maxwell, two failed Secret Service agents now working as private detectives in Washington, D.C. (The characters are based on those in a series of bestselling crime novels by David Baldacci.)

Tenney and Romijn make an appealing pair, even if their playful banter sounds like it came from rejected "Moonlighting" scripts. Speaking of that 1980s chestnut, it also might have inspired the will-they-or-won't-they romantic tension between the two leads. When she hops into the shower after rowing a boat to his office (they're so eccentric!), she leaves the door ajar because, well, there's supposed to be romantic tension.

In the premiere, King and Maxwell first chase down a man in a beaver suit driving a stolen bus before trying to solve the murder of one of his old friends, a lawyer representing an accused serial killer. The convoluted episode involves a far-fetched conspiracy, defense contracts and a predictable twist at the end.

As is almost obligatory in these situations, they butt heads with law enforcement, in this case an FBI agent (scowling Michael O'Keefe) who considers them "a couple of washed-up bullet-catchers who got retired because you screwed up."

The show has a decent balance of action and humor, as well as Ryan Hurst (Opie from "Sons of Anarchy") as a sort of savant who might be a series regular.

With all that going for it and the chemistry of its leads, "King & Maxwell" might grow into something fresher, but right now it just feels all too familiar.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Gemini May 21-June 21

Jupiter is reminding you that you're too sexy for, well, just about everything. You're better than that co-worker who just got promoted over you. You're sexier than that homely friend of yours who, oddly enough, is engaged.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Jupiter is making you edgy. You're realizing that there's a huge dating world out there, and you want to be in the best situation for you. Give yourself more time.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Group situations could be too much for you as Pluto encourages you to play the hermit. You're still processing a lot of stuff, thinking over past relationships and trying to figure out what to do in your current one.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Avoid miscommunication. Mercury could create some moments where you find yourself saying the worst possible thing. Don't tell your wife what you really think about her sister.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Beware of repeating the same mistakes over and over again. Remember when you followed the rodeo for a while? Don't date another cowboy. Avoid repeats.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

With the moon opposite your sign, take it slow. If you've met someone special, don't rush things. And if you're already in a relationship, don't get tricked into making a big promise that you're not really prepared to keep.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You won't have much energy as Mars saps your strength. Don't be hard on yourself if you can't do 100 sit-ups or a dozen pull-ups. This is the time to be lazy.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

As an emotional Water sign, it's important for you to be best friends with your sweetheart. Mercury is helping you share crazy stories, sexy fantasies and bold ideas with your honey.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You could be attracted to someone who is your opposite. You'll be drawn to a new friend who is shy and insecure. The sun is inspiring you to coax this person out of his or her shell and enjoy a world of light flirtation with you.

Aries March 21-April 19

An outgoing moon has you itching for attention. You'll want to show some extra flesh in your sexiest outfit and spend time in a place where people will notice your glorious sexiness.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Mars is making you annoyed at every little thing. But is it worth breaking up with your guy just because he forgot to take out the trash? Do you really want to end things with your girl just because she ruined your favorite shirt?

Taurus April 20-May 20

Other people are giving you advice, and it's startling to be overwhelming. But your mother can't pick your husband for you, and your best friend from college isn't qualified to decide if your current girlfriend is "the one." The sun says be sensible.

ROLLIN', ROLLIN'

THE STONES AND THEIR FAMOUS FANS
GET SOME SATISFACTION IN CHICAGO

Mick Jagger of The Rolling Stones performing at the United Center on June 3. NUCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com
» @aboutluisgomez

they checked out what Chicago had to offer and

The Rolling Stones wrapped up the last of three shows at the United Center last week and are preparing for two shows this week in Boston. While there, it's a safe bet that the band members will try the local cuisine and kiss up to the crowd by lending their support to the Stanley Cup-bound Boston Bruins—just as

(The Blackhawks will face the Bruins in the Stanley Cup Final beginning Wednesday, but you probably already knew that.)

Mick Jagger dined May 29 at French-Vietnamese restaurant Le Colonial, where he drank a Chinese beer called Tsingtao. Afterward, the nearly 70-year-old rocker was seen dancing at both Studio Paris (Paris Club's upstairs lounge) and Cuvee. Jagger tweeted a photo of himself the following day at what appears to be the Nature Boardwalk at the Lincoln Park Zoo.

Keith Richards opted for dinner with his family May 29 at Mastro's Steakhouse. Fellow Rolling Stones guitarist Ronnie Wood was spotted shopping at Topman in the Gold Coast.

Speaking of sightings, there were a few bold names in the crowd during the Stones' shows. Jay Cutler and Kristin Cavallari took in the May 28 show. "Leather pants, my Copertina shoe, and smokey eyes. Rolling Stones baby!!" Cavallari tweeted.

Miles Teller ("21 and Over"), like Cavallari, posted a photo of himself at the May 28 show on Twitter. Teller is in town filming the sci-fi film "Divergent" and tweeted that he attended two of the Rolling Stones' shows here.

ALSO SPOTTED ...

- » Patrick Kane was given a standing ovation Saturday at Chicago Cut Steakhouse following his three-goal performance against the L.A. Kings, according to restaurant staff. Teammate Michael Frolik had dinner at Mastro's Steakhouse after the game.
- » Derrick Rose was spotted Friday at RM Champagne Salon.
- » Patrick Stewart dined May 31 at Chicago Cut Steakhouse.
- » Miles Teller dined Wednesday at Sunda. Fellow "Divergent" actors Theo James, Christian Madsen and Amy Newbold attended the Blackhawks' win at the United Center on Saturday.
- » Train guitarist Jimmy Stafford had lunch Thursday at Tavern on Rush.
- » Giuliana Rancie ordered coffee Friday at Sacred Grounds Bakery & Cafe at Water Tower Place mall. Fellow "E! News" personality Catt Sadler hosted the fashion-focused Simply Stylist series Saturday at the Dana Hotel and Spa and then dined at RPM Italian, which is co-owned by Rancie. Sadler dined Friday at Nellcote.
- » The Indianapolis Colts' Andrew Luck had dinner May 31 at Gibsons Bar and Steakhouse.

THE DIGIT $36.4 MILLION

That's how much "The Purge," which was made for $3 million, earned in its debut weekend to finish No. 1 at the domestic box office, latimes.com reports. "The Internship" opened with $18.1 million to finish fourth.

“Being in a funny movie doesn't make me have to answer dumb questions.”

—Jonah Hill, in Rolling Stone magazine, promoting "This is the End" and not answering dumb questions because he's a serious actor

Let there be dudes

Dude. That's Jake Gyllenhaal (above right), dressed as The Dude from "The Big Lebowski," with The Original Dude, Jeff Bridges. He presented Bridges with The Original Dude Award on Saturday at the Spike TV Guys Choice Awards in Culver City, Calif. Got all that?

A jolly ol' egging

The talk of the "Britain's Got Talent" finale Saturday night was not the winner but an egg-throwing viola player who managed to upend the live broadcast—and splatter a few yolks on judge Simon Cowell. Cowell, who headed off stage to change his shirt and jacket, later tweeted, "I really don't like eggs."

Reese on the run?

Fresh off last month's brush with the law, Reese Witherspoon has been attached to a comedy about a cop and a prisoner on the run, deadline.com reports. Sofia Vergara will co-star in "Don't Mess With Texas." Though it wasn't clear which woman will play which role, we're totally rooting for Witherspoon to be the prisoner.

Class reunion

Get ready to feel really old: "Boy Meets World" premiered 20 years ago in September. Many of the cast members gathered over the weekend at the ATX Television Festival in Austin, Texas, to talk about old times on the show, as well as new ones on "Girl Meets World," vulture.com reports. Among the new stuff we learned: Rider Strong was the ONLY person to audition for the role of Shawn. We wouldn't have had him any other way.
